

Marchini Palace

Marchini Palace was built around the 1400s.

Today it is the seat of Giaveno town hall.

The palace belonged to the noble family Molines. The last heir of the family gave the palace to Francesco Marchini, at that time their secretary.

Francesco didn't have heirs too, so he left the palace to his sister Maria Teresa, a patriotic and very religious woman.

In 1926 Maria Teresa Marchini donated the palace to the town of Giaveno, that is why it is known as Marchini Palace.

Some year later the park around the palace became a public place, where the citizens of Giaveno can meet and relax surrounded by a green lung.
